Recipe for success: How UGA SBDC helped Dunwoody wine venue rebound and grown

Atlanta area wine and dine emporium Vino Venue had enjoyed a decade of success before owner Lelia Bryan contacted the University of Georgia Small Business Development Center (UGA SBDC). Customers were hesitant to return following the COVID-19 pandemic, and she needed help drawing them back in.

Mark Collier, area director of the UGA SBDC in DeKalb, introduced Bryan to a team of consultants who assessed the business and suggested improvements to its restaurant operations and digital marketing strategy. After a year of working with the UGA SBDC, Vino Venue's sales had grown 20% and its workforce had doubled, allowing Bryan to launch a new venture focused on culinary travel. Vino Venue originally began as a wine school founded by Bryan's late husband, Michael. Now the Dunwoody business includes cooking classes, a wine store, a wine club, a full-service restaurant, and guided wine country tours.

Like many other restaurants, Vino Venue faced challenges due to the pandemic, and Bryan was concerned about her business' future, said Collier. The goal was to figure out the new normal in the wake of the pandemic.

"After COVID, we had difficulty bouncing back. I wanted to engage the SBDC to help us transition and figure out what we needed to change to meet the times," Bryan said.

Water Safety and Kids: What you Should Know

Water and summertime fun often go hand in hand. Yet for too many children, water can pose a serious risk of injury or death.

Among children aged one to four, drowning is the leading cause of death, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). Drowning is also one of the top three leading causes of accidental injury death in people ages 5 to 34. For every child who drowns, five end up in the emergency department with critical injuries — some never fully recover, according to the United States Lifesaving Association (USLA).

These tips from the CDC, USLA and Water Safety USA can help you protect your child — and you — from water danger this summer:
