Why Should Kids Care About Agriculture?

Agstravaganza shows why Ag matters even if you'll never farm

What is agriculture, and why should kids care about it? I had the privilege of attending the Agstravaganza event put on by the Cambridge FFA this week. A school yard full of oxen, rabbits, Farm Credits, flower shops, tractors, tires, and so much more. Kids from pre-school to senior year came out to learn about agriculture, and the experience was unlike any other, especially when it came to asking kids questions about farm life.

Reviving a Small Town's Heart: Georgia entrepreneur helps transform downtown Demorest with UGA SBDC guidance

When Chadwick Peck took a drive through North Georgia, he wasn't just sightseeing—he was scouting for opportunity. A longtime entrepreneur with a passion for revitalizing old buildings, Peck spotted two rundown commercial structures in downtown Demorest and immediately saw their potential.

But restoring neglected properties takes more than vision. It requires capital, a solid plan and the right support. That's when Peck turned to the University of Georgia Small Business Development Center (UGA SBDC) to help with the financing needed to bring his idea to life.

As the owner of Intown Contracting and Mark of the Potter in Habersham County, Peck had previously worked with the UGA SBDC and had experience breathing new life into aging properties. But this project posed a unique challenge: the buildings were in rough shape, and traditional lenders were not willing to finance the deal.

"Chad's vision and commitment to downtown revitalization will have a lasting impact on the area," said Ramon. "I am proud to have supported him in this endeavor."

5 Georgia Drive-In Theaters you Can't Miss

During the peak of the drive-in movie craze, the world saw more than 5,500 theaters – most of those in the U.S. Today, there are less than 350 worldwide. And what a shame, as they offer families such a fun, affordable option for adventure.

Luckily, Georgia boasts five drive-in theaters, including the world's largest screen. Pack up the family and head out for a double feature this weekend!
